This is a website that is meant to broadcast both my blog style writing as well as showcase professional style writing.

As a senior this year, examples of my writings are one thing that I would like to have shown for prospective employers. This website will provide those employers with an example of my personal writing as well as my professional sports write ups. When I graduate, a foot in the door is all I will need, and this website will help me put that foot in the door.

Personas

Prospective Employers

People taking a chance on me will want to see an example of my writing. This website will certainly give them this chance.

Sports Fans

If someone missed the game and wants a more in depth summary than what was provided at ESPN, why not stop at my website?

Family

If my family members ask what I am doing or would like to see more of my work, they can always stop by to see what I am doing if they wouldn't like to text or call.

About Me

A photograph of two young men sitting side-by-side. The man on the left is wearing a grey t-shirt with 'NASA' on it. The man on the right is wearing a blue t-shirt with '1120' on it. They are both smiling and have their arms crossed. Behind them is a world map and a calendar.

I am Emmett Matasovsky, a senior at Michigan State pursuing a degree in Media and Information Management. I am 21 years old. I graduated from Lutheran High School Westland in the Spring of 2018 and continued my schooling at MSU all four years. I have always held an interest in both writing and sports work, which has led to the creation of this website. In "My Writings," you can see some of my writings regarding previous sporting events. I am a season ticket holder for both football and basketball, and I will frequently appear on TV, as my group and I live by the motto "Front Row or No Row."

Gameday Atmosphere- Blog Style The date was October 16, 2021. Michigan State football was finishing up their 20-15 victory over the Indiana Hoosiers. The second the clock hit all zeros, I received a text from my friend, Mat. "Thursday or Friday?" the text said. While most college students getting that text would be deciding a party or a double date, Mat and I were discussing a much more important piece of information: when to line up for Michigan State's home football game in two weeks. "Friday morning" was the reply, and thus, the most exhilarating 48 hours of my life were set in stone. As Michigan State was off the next weekend, I was free to head home and pick up all the supplies I would need for the upcoming week. Multiple towels, a sports umbrella, yoga mat, and sleeping bag later, I thought I was prepared. As it would turn out, I was not. Thursday of game week rolls around. The game starts, and the Gameday crew appears correct. Michigan receiver Andre Anthony Jr., an East Lansing High School product, catches his first career pass and sprints 93 yards untouched to the endzone. 10 minutes of gametime later, Michigan tacks on a Jake Moody field goal to make the game a 10-0 contest after one quarter. In the stands, the energetic crowd has calmed down, as upperclassmen remember the Michigan State teams from their freshman and sophomore years. The next drive will be crucial to keep the crowd in the game, and coordinator Jay Johnson takes the Michigan defense to school, as Michigan State runningback Kenneth Walker III cruises into the endzone on a 27-yard score at the beginning of the second. Walker appeared to be stuffed for no gain on the play but found a hole on the left side of the Michigan State line and picked up a block from Connor Heyward to wind up with 6 points. Michigan will be the next team to respond, with another Moody field goal, expanding the Wolverine's gap to 13-7. Not to be outdone, Michigan State quickly replies with another Walker III rushing touchdown, this time from 8 yards as the Wolverines were not set on defense, giving an easy touchdown to the Spartans and their first lead of
